Traditional Arts & Crafts

PERANAKAN PORCELAIN

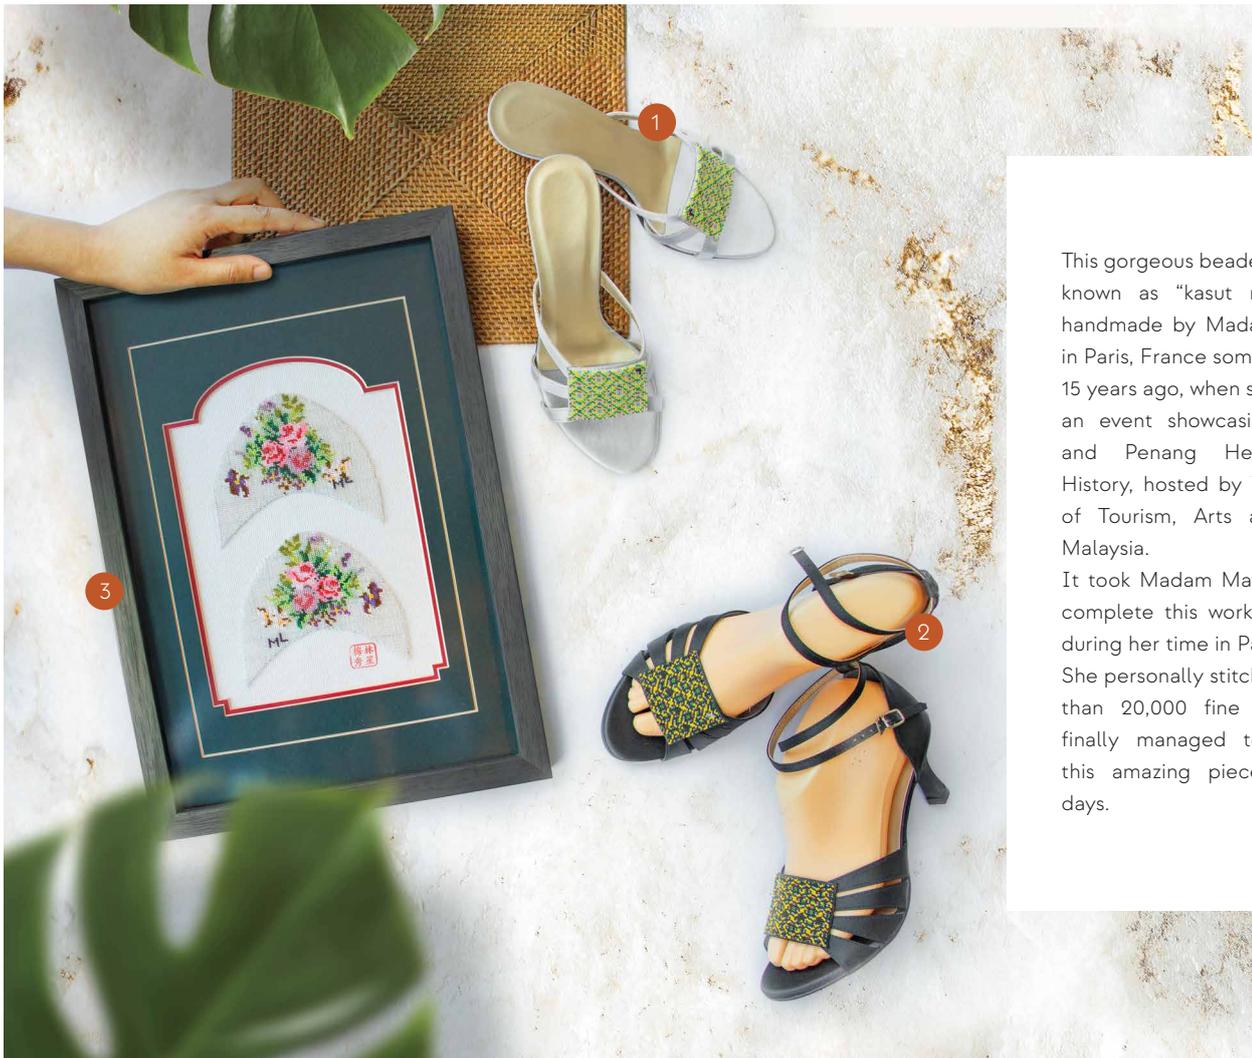

Peranakan Porcelain was made in China as a result of a specialized market in South East Asia, mainly Malaysia and Singapore. Peranakan or Baba Nyonya are terms for a subgroup of the Straits Chinese and their unique culture. They are the descendants of early Chinese immigrants who settled on both sides of the Malacca Straits between the 15th and 17th centuries, mainly in the areas of present-day Singapore, Malacca and Penang.

In the second half of the 19th century, affluent Straits Chinese started ordering porcelain wares in China, having them custom-made to their liking. These Nyonya wares represent one of the most colorful porcelain wares made in China. Straits Chinese porcelain is generally brighter in color. According to the symbolic meaning in Peranakan culture, the phoenix and peony have a more prominent position.

NYONYA MAY LIM SIEW SENG

This gorgeous beaded shoe, also known as “kasut manek” was handmade by Madam May Lim in Paris, France some 15 years ago, when she attended an event showcasing Malacca and Penang Heritage and History, hosted by The Ministry of Tourism, Arts and Culture Malaysia. It took Madam May 10 days to complete this work-of-art shoe during her time in Paris. She personally stitched on more than 20,000 fine beads, and finally managed to complete this amazing piece within 10 days.

PENAN BAG

Deep in mythical Borneo forest in north Sarawak, Malaysia, lives a tribe that once lived as nomads, known as the Penan. Penan ladies are known for their intricate weaving skills with rattan. But as these jungle vines become increasingly scarce, some have begun to make baskets from plastic packing straps sold in hardware stores normally used for tying boxes for transportation.
